Oahu's Defenses Strong Enough To Repel Attack, Tour Of Isle Discloses

BEACH DISTRICT IS INVULNERABLE

Mighty System Of Crossfire Guns Established

By Richard Haller

HONOLULU, Feb. 18—Strong Oahu island defenses, speedily prepared since December 7, are now believed strong enough to annihilate any enemy seaborne force which might attempt a landing. Power of the defenses which have sprung up since the Japanese "sneak raid" on Pearl Harbor was revealed today when the Army authorities permitted correspondents to make a detailed inspection of the defense work done since commencement of the Pacific conflict. On December 7, virtually no underground protection existed. But during the intervening ten and a half weeks soldiers stationed on Oahu have spent their time like moles, burrowing in the ground and strengthening and concealing the defense fortifications.

We drove 40 miles along the shore, scarcely able to see the concealed defense works. Then we back-tracked, and the commanding officers revealed the hidden fortifications. First we saw a shore battery of 75 mm guns skillfully hidden amid the hills, capable of concentrated crossfire and able to rake the area 400 yards from shore where a landing might be attempted.

Then we saw heavier calibre guns let loose against an area half a mile from shore. They raked this spot precisely with extremely accurate fire.

Beach Visited

Next we were taken to a position on the beach near the most vulnerable spot. Inside an innocent-looking grove we dropped through a trap door, crawled on our stomachs and emerged in a cave where a 37 mm gun joined other guns and machine guns in a dense crossfire through which, an officer said, no landing boat could live.

Visits to similar positions indicated the shore and hills of Oahu are virtually bristling with such batteries.

Next we visited a pair of pill boxes able to withstand direct bomb hits and guarding a tiny bay in a remote part of the island, where machine guns barked death toward the sea.

The greatest surprise came when our car turned off into a former pasture area and emerged unexpectedly at the edge of a gigantic airport, already usable although not yet completed. This airport provides facilities for the most ingenious concealment and dispersal of planes.

Finally we visited a completely camouflaged camp for infantry

ROMMEL'S AXIS FORCE RETREATS TO GAZALA AREA

LONDON, Feb. 18—A new retreat by axis forces on the Libyan battle front was announced by British military authorities today. Nazi Gen. Erwin Rommel's troops have definitely retired to a point 20 miles west of El Gazala on the coast, from which he last started his main attack, it was stated.

Authorities declared it was difficult to ascertain the precise reason for Rommel's retirement. But they conjectured it probably was carried out because the axis forces came up against stronger air resistance than Rommel had anticipated.

In addition, it was said, the axis forces also suffered comparatively severe losses in an aerial battle three days ago.

Defense Calls Morgenthau, But Treasury Chief Has Not Been Served

FISH, LUNDEEN MENTIONED

German Propagandist Used Congressional Frank To Send His Mail

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—The trial of George Sylvester Viereck, Nazi propagandist charged with violation of the foreign agents registration act, went into its third day today as it was learned that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau may appear as a defense witness.

A subpoena has been sent out for the treasury official to testify in the district court trial, but no return has yet been received.

The crowded court room heard the government to attempt to link Rep. Fish (R) N. Y., and the late Sen. Lundeen (FL) Minn., with Viereck's "propaganda machine" in the United States.

In his opening speech, William P. Maloney, special assistant to the attorney general, charged that Viereck wrote speeches for Lundeen, had "the run of his office," and that Fish used his congressional frank to mail out one of Lundeen's speeches at the propagandist's instructions.

The government's first witness Sigmund Hauck, former president of Flanders Hall, Inc., a Scotch Plains, N. J., publishing house, identified several speeches Lundeen, had "the run of his office," congressional record as material written by Viereck.

Hauck, who was continued on the stand today, told how Viereck paid his company to publish his writings which the witness later said were translations of German books.

Maloney charged that Lundeen collaborated with Viereck in writing the pamphlet "Lord Lothian vs. Lord Lothian" and that the Allies Make Slashing Attacks At Tokyo's Troops On Sumatra; Fortresses Score Twice In Raid On Nippon Vessels

New Reinforcements Being Poured Onto Luzon To Try For Knockout Against MacArthur; Many Bombs Are Thrown

International News Service War Editor

Japan struck today at the gateway to Australia and at the great Dutch naval base at Surabaya—but the united nations struck as well.

While General Douglas MacArthur reported from his Bataan base that the enemy is bombing his troops almost constantly, the war department at Washington and the united nations high command on Java announced slashing attacks against the Japanese on and off the island of Sumatra.

Flying fortresses scored direct hits on two transports and destroyed two barges off Bangka island near Sumatra, Washington reported. General Sir Archibald P. Wavell's communique said that six enemy war planes were destroyed by American and Dutch pilots in a raid on a Japanese-occupied Sumatra airdrome, while one large transport was sunk, two hit and many troop-laden barges destroyed.

The Japanese intensified their artillery fire on American positions at Bataan and sent a "fairly large" troop convoy to Subic bay. New reinforcements arrived at Olongapo.

Chinese in Thailand

But still it was not a Japanese field day. Heavy fighting was reported in an Indian radio broadcast on the Rangoon front, and there was a rumor that Chinese troops had invaded Thailand. The raid on Surabaya—the third in as many weeks and another prelude to attempted invasion of Java—cost the Japanese five precious bombers and little adamage was done in the attack.

A lone Nipponese plane, ominous harbinger of greater attacks to come raided the city of Kupang on the Dutch portion of the island of Timor, only a hop, skip and a jump by air from the great north Australian fortress of Darwin.

While United States army and Navy air forces scoured Atlantic coastal waters and the Caribbean for axis u-boats, Japan's menace in the far East took form and shape. Outnumbered Dutch on the island of Sumatra strove to hold back the Japanese driving south from Palembang toward the Sunda straits as the western arm of a gigantic pincers and all preparations of defense of Java were rushed to completion.

Fully aware of the situation's gravity, the Australian war cabinet met again in Sydney. Among other emergency measures was a decision to suspend radio and telephonic communications with the United States and the Dutch East Indies except for certain approved services.

against the axis in terms of defense.

Rommel Moves Back

The day brought a few bright spots to the somber war picture.

Possibly for strategic reasons, or perhaps because he underestimated British air strength, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel ordered his axis forces to backtrack in Libya and retired to a point 20 miles west of El Gazala on the coast, from which he last started his main attack.

British authorities at the same time threw cold water on a Japanese claim that their troops are now within 13 miles of Rangoon, insisting that the temporary "pause" on the vital Burma front still prevails.

On the heels of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's announcement that the axis navy lost rather than gained in the spectacular escape from Brest of the battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the cruiser Prinz Eugen, the British admiralty threw down another axis claim of Mediterranean victories.

In a recent three-day battle between heavily protected British convoys and the Italian fleet and air force, nine Italian planes were shot down or damaged, while three Italian cruisers and a destroyer definitely hit by air bombs or torpedoes.

Contrary to axis claims, the entire convoys reached their destination save for two damaged and scuttled merchantmen, while one British warship was only superficially damaged.

America's u-bat search was intensified following the torpedo sinking of the Brazilian steamer Buarque on Sunday.

One member of the vessel's crew was lost and one was missing. Seventy-two crew members and 11 passengers were landed safely at Norfolk, Va.

At the same time American and Dutch bombers searched the Caribbean area for German submarines to prevent a repetition of the shelling of oil installations on the island of Aruba in the Dutch West Indies.

In the Philippines the situation remained grave for the forces defending the Bataan peninsula under Gen. Douglas MacArthur. He reported enemy air activity and artillery fire were increasing and said the Japs were moving more heavy guns into position. It appeared that the American and Filipino forces faced another major Jap land attack.

Reports from Batavia indicated fighting on southern Sumatra was raging with unabated violence. The Japs there were pressing their great pincers offensive, aimed at Java, chief united nations stronghold in the Netherlands East Indies region.

Preparations to defend Java against an anticipated Jap assault were rushed and the people of this principal N.E.I. island were told that the enemy is ready to "storm these gates."

Already On Java?

A Stefani (Italian) news agency report—admittedly unconfirmed—had it that Jap troops already have landed on Java. But there was absolutely no verification of this claim and it was treated with reserve and distrust.

The Rome radio claimed that Jap naval units have entered Singapore harbor and also asserted that Nipponese troops in Burma are only 13 miles from Rangoon, there was no confirmation of this later report from any responsible source.

In Tokyo, Premier Tojo in a chest-beating speech asserted that Japanese capture of Singapore marks the "birth of new Asia and a turning point in world history." But he tempered this outburst of exuberant oratory with an admission that "further efforts" will be needed before the enemies of the axis are "brought to their knees."

From Rangoon came a report that a mighty Chinese army is massed in Yunnan province, northeast of Burma, and that the first major Chinese action in defense of the Burma road

TERHUNE, FAMED WRITER OF DOG STORIES, IS DEAD

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., Feb. 18 — Albert Payson Terhune, America's best known writer of dog stories, died today at 69 of a heart ailment after a long illness.

Terhune was 42 before he began the series of stories and books which won a place for the dog in fiction and won fame for the author.

At the height of his writing career his income was reported to be as high as $90,000 annually. Terhune worked as much as 12 hours a day, maintaining the pace until he was 64.

Then he cut his writing tasks to two syndicated columns a week and learned to relax.

His first fiction was written in collaboration with his mother and his next "fiction" attempt was as ghost writer for Jim Jeffries, Kid McCoy and other sports figures.

For years he bombarded magazines with dog stories, all of them returned until 1914 when an editor, attracted by one of Terhune's collies, worked up enthusiasm for a fiction piece about that collie.

It was "Lad," a handsome collie that touched the editor's affections and it was "Lad" who became the subject of three Terhune books, innumerable magazine pieces and even of motion pictures.

SWEDEN WHO LIKES JAPS GIVEN BEATING AND PUT IN JAIL BY BARRISTER

CHICAGO, Feb. 18 — Earl Swanson, a Swedish alien, reflected in a jail cell today that maybe he made a tactical mistake in sounding off the way he did.

Parading in front of the city hall, Swanson shouted: "Down with the United States; I hope the Japs wipe the United States off the map. I wish I was in Tokyo."

In no time at all a crowd had dragged the husky Swanson into a convenient alley and was giving him a thorough going-over when police stopped the mayhem.

"I can't send you to Tokyo, but I can fine you $100 and costs and send you to jail if you can't pay it," Municipal Judge Oscar Caplan told the battered orator later. That's where he sent him.

SCULPTOR UNDER ARREST IN DRAFT EVASION CASE

CHICAGO, Feb. 18 — Described by the late Lorado Taft as having "outstanding genius," David R. Nyvall Jr., young sculptor, provided Chicago today with its first case of draft evasion as the outgrowth of Monday's registration for military service.

Nyvall wrote U. S. Attorney J. Albert Wolf: "I hereby notify you of my decision to break this law, as I have no alternative. I cannot register—I cannot kill—I cannot support those who do kill."

Wolf called Nyvall to his office and urged him to register and later appeal to his draft board as a conscientious objector, but Nyvall refused. He later pleaded guilty to draft evasion before U. S. Commissioner E. K. Walker who fixed bond of $1,500.

ROME DECLARES BIG BATTLE ON IN EAST INDIES

This dispatch was sent from an enemy country, whose motive in releasing news is likely to be propaganda. Axis claims should be credited only when confirmed by American or Allied sources.

LONDON, Feb. 18 — A Rome radio broadcast heard in London said today that a great battle is raging in the jungles of Sumatra in the Netherlands East Indies.

The broadcast quoted a Tokyo report to the effect that Japanese troops, supported by paratroopers, have surrounded Dutch defense forces there.

The Rome radio also said Japanese operations in Burma are proceeding according to plan and that the Nipponese forces are reported within 13 miles of Rangoon.

(There was no confirmation of this latter report from any responsible source.)

Possibly for strategic reasons, or perhaps because he underestimated British air strength, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel ordered his axis forces to backtrack in Libya and retired to a point 20 miles west of El Gazala on the coast, from which he last started his main attack.

British authorities at the same time threw cold water on a Japanese claim that their troops are now within 13 miles of Rangoon, insisting that the temporary "pause" on the vital Burma front still prevails.

On the heels of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's announcement that the axis navy lost rather than gained in the spectacular escape from Brest of the battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the cruiser Prinz Eugen, the British admiralty threw down another axis claim of Mediterranean victories.

In a recent three-day battle between heavily protected British convoys and the Italian fleet and air force, nine Italian planes were shot down or damaged, while three Italian cruisers and a destroyer definitely hit by air bombs or torpedoes.

Contrary to axis claims, the entire convoys reached their destination save for two damaged and scuttled merchantmen, while one British warship was only superficially damaged. America's U-boat search was intensified following the torpedo sinking of the Brazilian steamer Buarque on Sunday.

One member of the vessel's crew was lost and one was missing. Seventy-two crew members and 11 passengers were landed safely at Norfolk, Va.

At the same time American and Dutch bombers searched the Caribbean area for German submarines to prevent a repetition of the shelling of oil installations on the island of Aruba in the Dutch West Indies.

In the Philippines the situation remained grave for the forces defending the Bataan peninsula under Gen. Douglas MacArthur. He reported enemy air activity and artillery fire were increasing and said the Japs were moving more heavy guns into position. It appeared that the American and Filipino forces faced another major Jap land attack.

Reports from Batavia indicated fighting on southern Sumatra was raging with unabated violence. The Japs there were pressing their great pincer offensive, aimed at Java, chief united nations stronghold in the Netherlands East Indies region.

Preparations to defend Java against an anticipated Jap assault were rushed and the people of this principal N.E.I. island were told that the enemy is ready to "storm these gates."

Already On Java?

A Stefani (Italian) news agency report—admittedly unconfirmed—had it that Jap troops already have landed on Java. But there was absolutely no verification of this claim and it was treated with reserve and distrust.

The Rome radio claimed that Jap naval units have entered Singapore harbor and also asserted that Nipponese troops in Burma are only 13 miles from Rangoon, there was no confirmation of this later report from any responsible source.

In Tokyo, Premier Tojo in a chest-beating speech asserted that Japanese capture of Singapore marks the "birth of new Asia and a turning point in world history." But he tempered this outburst of exuberant oratory with an admission that "further efforts" will be needed before the enemies of the axis are "brought to their knees."

From Rangoon came a report that a mighty Chinese army is massed in Yunnan province, northeast of Burma, and that the first major Chinese action in defense of the Burma road

TERHUNE, FAMED WRITER OF DOG STORIES, IS DEAD

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., Feb. 18 — Albert Payson Terhune, America's best known writer of dog stories, died today at 69 of a heart ailment after a long illness.

Terhune was 42 before he began the series of stories and books which won a place for the dog in fiction and won fame for the author.

At the height of his writing career his income was reported to be as high as $90,000 annually. Terhune worked as much as 12 hours a day, maintaining the pace until he was 64.

Then he cut his writing tasks to two syndicated columns a week and learned to relax.

His first fiction was written in collaboration with his mother and his next "fiction" attempt was as ghost writer for Jim Jeffries, Kid McCoy and other sports figures.

For years he bombarded magazines with dog stories, all of them returned until 1914 when an editor, attracted by one of Terhune's collies, worked up enthusiasm for a fiction piece about that collie.

It was "Lad," a handsome collie that touched the editor's affections and it was "Lad" who became the subject of three Terhune books, innumerable magazine pieces and even of motion pictures.

SWEDE WHO LIKES JAPS GIVEN BEATING AND PUT IN JAIL BY BARRISTER

CHICAGO, Feb. 18 — Earl Swanson, a Swedish alien, reflected in a jail cell today that maybe he made a tactical mistake in sounding off the way he did.

Parading in front of the city hall, Swanson shouted: "Down with the United States; I hope the Japs wipe the United States off the map. I wish I was in Tokyo."

In no time at all a crowd had dragged the husky Swanson into a convenient alley and was giving him a thorough going-over when police stopped the mayhem.

"I can't send you to Tokyo, but I can fine you $100 and costs and send you to jail if you can't pay it," Municipal Judge Oscar Caplan told the battered orator later. That's where he sent him.

SCULPTOR UNDER ARREST IN DRAFT EVASION CASE

CHICAGO, Feb. 18 — Described by the late Lorado Taft as having "outstanding genius," David R. Nyvall Jr., young sculptor, provided Chicago today with its first case of draft evasion as the outgrowth of Monday's registration for military service.

Nyvall wrote U. S. Attorney J. Albert Wolf: "I hereby notify you of my decision to break this law, as I have no alternative. I cannot register—I cannot kill—I cannot support those who do kill."

Wolf called Nyvall to his office and urged him to register and later appeal to his draft board as a conscientious objector, but Nyvall refused. He later pleaded guilty to draft evasion before U. S. Commissioner E. K. Walker who fixed bond of $15,000.

ROME DECLARES BIG BATTLE ON IN EAST INDIES

This dispatch was sent from an enemy country, whose motive in releasing news is likely to be propaganda. Axis claims should be credited only when confirmed by American or Allied sources.

LONDON, Feb. 18 — A Rome radio broadcast heard in London said today that a great battle is raging in the jungles of Sumatra in the Netherlands East Indies.

The broadcast quoted a Tokyo report to the effect that Japanese troops, supported by paratroopers, have surrounded Dutch defense forces there.

The Rome radio also said Japanese operations in Burma are proceeding according to plan and that the Nipponese forces are reported within 13 miles of Rangoon.

(There was no confirmation of this latter report from any responsible source.)

Five contestants took the test at the office of Superintendent George McDowell on February 7. Announcement of the results came to McDowell from Ray G. Wood, director of Ohio scholarship tests.

The D.A.R. test is open each year to senior girls in high schools throughout the state. Each school is entitled to one participant, chosen for her outstanding scholastic record.

INSTRUCTOR IS NAMED

Registration May Be Made At County Health Office; Groups Limited To 35

Red Cross started Wednesday to enroll classes for first aid instruction under the national defense program, male and female residents to start a course in training next week. Leo Curtis of Kingston RFD 1 is chief instructor for the course.

Women's classes will be conducted in Memorial hall and men will report at city hall for training which will be conducted in the council chamber. Women who have already taken a standard first aid course may receive advanced training.

Women's classes will be conducted Monday and Wednesday each week from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m.; men will be trained from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

Red Cross is taking an active role in defense work, first aid training being one of its important tasks. Persons enrolling for the course will be required to undergo 20 hours of training for the standard course and 30 hours for an advance course.

Classes will be limited to 35 persons, and registration may be made by telephoning 520, the county health office, or by reporting there in person between hours of 9 and 12 a. m. and 1 and 4:30 p. m. each day.

Red Cross is in need of instruction books and urges any persons who may have such books to offer them for the duration of the training period. They will be returned after the classes have been completed.

Necessity for early enrollment was pointed out by Red Cross officials who said that the first 35

Equipment for Livestock Production Is Important

John G. Boggs, chairman of the Pickaway county War Board, called on farmers of the community Wednesday to repair their livestock producing equipment in the county's "Food for Freedom" effort.

The War Board chairman listed eight reasons which lay behind the request. They were:

1. Production of stock-raising equipment, like other farm equipment, has been reduced because of wartime demands on factories, and only through early orders will farmers be certain of getting needed materials in time;

2. Transportation facilities may be overloaded with war materials in the spring, making it difficult to get delivery of such items;

3. Emphasis is being placed on repair of used equipment, rather persons to register for each class would be accepted. Thirty-five women may enroll for the Monday and Wednesday training and 35 men for Tuesday and Thursday classes.

than the purchase of new materials;

4. Use of material for manufacture of new farm equipment is restricted to an average of about 83 percent of the materials similarly used in 1940. Various types of equipment used in livestock production vary considerably above and below this average. Materials for manufacture of repair parts are available in larger quantity than the 1940 average;

5. No metals at all are permitted to be used for the manufacture of hog troughs, where substitute materials can be used;

6. Use of materials for manufacture of steel stock tanks is restricted to 52 percent, while use of materials for manufacture of wooden stock tanks is permitted at 351 percent of the 1940 level;

7. Use of materials for manufacture of manger and stall partitions and fittings, stock feeders, and steel stock pens, ranges from 26 to 50 percent of the 1940 level; feed and litter carriers and tracks, feed trucks, and hay forks, 100 percent; feed cookers, tank heaters and similar equipment, 81 to 100 percent of the 1940 level;

Ashville Defense Board Busy Planning Program

The second in a series of defense meetings for the Ashville community was held Monday evening. Many interesting and important topics were discussed regarding certain committees and the progress which has been made since the initial meeting two weeks ago.

Mrs. Earl Essick, treasurer of the salvage committee reported a total sale of $23.68 for waste materials sold at the conclusion of the collections Sunday, February 15. A total of 4,200 pounds of paper, 130 pounds rags and 180 pounds of iron were sold.

Classes in first-aid will begin soon, it was decided at this meeting, and it is planned to hold classes once each week for a six week period.

A discussion took place regarding protection at the water tower, waterworks building, etc., and several suggestions were made to make these places safe against possible saboteurs.

The Tire Rationing committee chairman, Eugene Borror, reported that many rules have been changed within the last two weeks and that a few tires have been dispensed.

Mayor Hines was in charge of the meeting and several persons gave short talks. Among them were C. A. Higley, C. E. Mahaffey, Harry Margulis, Stanley Bowers, Ed Schlegel, Harold Bowers, Mrs. Roger Hedges, Mrs. William Fischer, Jr. and A. W. Graham.

It was decided, after some discussion to hold meetings every two weeks. That being correct, the next meeting of the Defense Council will take place March 2.

The committee, C. E. Mahaffey, Charles Eversole and Robert Walden in charge of junk collecting last Saturday were very ably assisted in the work by the following youngsters: Ellis Cline, Walter Bivens, William Hinkle, Harold Bickle, Dale Schiff, William Glick. The next collection will be on Saturday morning, February 28.

Registration for volunteers for civilian defense will be held at the local council house on Thursday, February 19, from 4 to 6 o'clock p. m. Volunteers for all kinds of defense work are urged to register at this time. Mrs. Edwina Bowen, registrar, will be in charge and will be assisted by Miss Marguerite Hoover.

According to announcement the Church of Christ in Christian Union congregation will hold a song-fest at 2 o'clock p. m., Sunday, February 22. Several groups of singers will be present. Everybody invited.

"Paid bills and that was all," fits in just right for both reports received from the Ashville-Harrison school board nad the local village council holding sessions Monday evening.

At her home near Marcy, Mrs. Don Swoyer gave a fish supper Sunday evening honoring the following who had birthdays this week and last: Eldon Swoyer,

Mrs. Maynard Marion, Max Marion and Don Swoyer.

The vote for the May Day festival Queen and her court was taken Friday and the report is: Virginia McDowell, queen of the senior class; her maid of honor is Jeanne Dunnick also a senior. The attendants are: Mary Jane Higley, senior; Eleanor Sark, senior; Mary Wilkins, junior; Dorothy Blair, sophomore; Virginia Baum, freshman.

Two new students, Claude Ferguson of Columbus, and Merna Carr of Walnut, entered the freshman class last week.

Beginning on Monday, Nolo Gulick is now employed at the Huntington National Bank, Columbus, as a bookkeeper. He has been a valued employee at the Cooper gas station here for the last couple of years working in the same capacity. With his wife they will remain in Ashville.

Ira Hoover and wife were over Monday guests of William and Mrs. Peer out at Walnut Creek Farm. When at home they are at Montpelier, Williams county. Mr. Hoover is engineer there in charge of both the city waterwork and electric plants.

ASHVILLE ENTRY HIGH IN COUNTY D. A. R. CONTEST

Highest score in the Daughters of American Revolution Good Citizenship test, held locally, for senior girls in Circleville and Pickaway county high schools was made by Miss Mary Higley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Higley of Ashville.

Miss Higley received a score of 134 out of a possible 150 points, placing her in the upper ten percent of the 401 participants.

Miss Dorothy Cook, Circleville high school, was second high in the county-wide contest, her score being 127, which placed her in the upper 25 percent of those who took the test.

Five contestants took the test at the office of Superintendent George McDowell on February 7. Announcement of the results came to McDowell from Ray G. Wood, director of Ohio scholarship tests.

The D.A.R. test is open each year to senior girls in high schools throughout the state. Each school is entitled to one participant, chosen for her outstanding scholastic record.

MORALE

POSSIBLY too much is being said about "national morale." It makes people self-conscious and nervous. The more we discuss this sort of thing, the more our supposedly stout and patriotic nation tends to develop into an outfit of hypochondriacs, earnestly discussing their symptoms
and getting nowhere.

What people need in such a situation
is to forget about themselves, to get outside of themselves, to fix their attention on their country and its needs in this crisis, to keep so busy in useful work that they forget about their nerves and their souls.

This is not only the most useful way but the happiest way. Right now it may be a lot better, for most of us, than the vacations that Secretary Ickes has been recommending to boost morale. We have to harden and toughen our bodies and spirits, to go ahead and do the things that have to be done now. The sooner we get out of ourselves and onto the big job, the better.

FARMER FAR FROM TOWN

WITH the shortage of cars and tires, the isolated country-dweller is going to be in a fix. Apparently he is not considered for priority. Unlike the city resident he has no street car to fall back on. Yet he does have to go to his village, at least for the traditional Saturday night shopping. How is he to get there?

There may still be good old Dobbin.
But does the farmer still have the old-fashioned carryall? We wonder if through all these years they are still in the barns.
If not, farmers may be victims again of the isolation that was theirs before the building of modern roads.

FAVORITISM

NO FAVORITISM on top. That has been one reason for German success so far.
We ourselves seem fairly free from it, but must be on guard.

In the last war Germany began with a mistake. The commander-in-chief, Helmuth von Moltke, was chosen largely because he was the nephew of the great general Von Moltke, the victor of the Franco-Prussian war. Other and better men were available, but were passed over because they were distasteful to the Kaiser.

Whether Hitler has had military favorites, we do not know. The dismissal of the capable Von Brauchitsch, replaced by Hit-

GUAYULE RUBBER ACT

WASHINGTON — Agricultural advisers are urging the President to veto the Guayule rubber act just passed by Congress giving a lush rubber bonanza to the International Rubber company in Arizona and southern California.

By this act the government would lease lands, materials, and guayule seedlings
from the International Rubber company
for $2,000,000 and at the end of 10 years
would turn them back to the private company with all the improvements; and since it takes several years for rubber plants to develop, the government presumably would turn the rubber plantations back to the private company just about the time
they become a thriving and profitable business.

Even the contracts for synthetic rubber factories, being built through Jesse Jones' loans, contain safeguards for the government's future property interests.

Most interesting thing about this Guayule Act is that the bill as originally passed by the Senate went quite far in safeguarding the public's interests. It provided that the government might "purchase" the land
from the International Rubber company
and thus not be under obligation to return it after 10 years of improvement.

The Senate bill also provided that the government might acquire the property by condemnation instead of having a maximum figure of $2,000,000 fixed. The Senate bill also provided that lands might be acquired in any part of the Western Hemisphere, thus letting Mexico in on the deal
under the Good Neighbor Policy—a country where guayule already grows. However, when certain Southwest Congressmen got through with the bill in the House, it was purged of all these protective provisions and confined the Secretary of Agriculture to leasing the land and relinquishing it after 10 years of improvement.

Note—During the final Senate debate, Senator Downey of California stated that the emasculated House bill had been okayed
by Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long. Other State Department officials, it is known, did not agree with Long.

WHITE HOUSE BARRIERS

The street which separates the White House from the Treasury (East Executive

cab drivers?"

"Oh yes, sir," replied the driver. "But they don't trust our passengers."

This particular passenger was William Vosmer, executive of Republic Steel cor-

ler, himself, was from the German standpoint an ominous sign. The allies, however, still hope to have Hitler show more and better favoritism.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

WILL The United Nations stay
united after the war?

Lord Halifax, British ambasador in this country, expressed the hope recently that they may do so. Some sort of a permanent federation of all English speaking peoples has been suggested before, but the 26 United Nations of today include several that speak other languages.
They all rate more or less as democracies, though. Some have kings and queens, to be sure, and a few have presidents who classify pretty dictatorially. Nevertheless, they call themselves democracies.
That is, they have in the past and do yet. That they still do so when the war's over it's a bit overly soon to say.

Indeed, there's considerable wondering whether or not we ourselves will, as a post-war proceeding,
cancel the centralization of governmental authority that we've adopted for the pending emergency.
At World War No. 1, and end
just that pretty fast, but that was largely because Woodrow Wilson, in the White House at the time, having a genuine passion for democracy, with a small as well as a capital D, wished his emergency powers back into congress' hands
as rapidly as he could. Some other president, whoever he may happen to be when the occasion arises,
may not be so ready to surrender them. If he's balky it's liable to be difficult to get back to the old system.

Still, we'll consider ourselves a democracy, anyway, and the others will go on so considering themselves.

More to Come

In fact, if Lord Halifax gets his wish and the United Nations lasts
on into the indefinite future, there are likely to be additions to the present 26—countries that haven't yet lined up, but surely will want to join if they see that the pact's
due to be a permanency.

The U. S. A. and the Latin
Americas would be a nucleus of 21.
England and the various British sub-commonwealths would be in on it, of course. And the Chinese,
the Scandinavians, the Low Countries and the rest of the collection
that temporarily are under Axis domination. France will be Free French by then, likewise; thus enigme and presumably willing.

Russia'll be a problem.
The total will exceed 26 in any event—if the thing's to continue as Lord Halifax hopes it will.

The idea seems rather more feasible than the suggested English-speaking federation. That kind of a federation appears to imply
a supreme head of it, picked by the whole outfit collectively. Probably the British dominions would agree to the selection; either of an Englishman or a Yankee, but it appears doubtful that the Latins or the Yanks, either of 'em would consent to subordinating 'emselvs
to the others, either way.

A permanent United Nations combinations, as Lord Halifax sketches out the scheme, evidently would be a looser organization,
with nobody exactly at the top—
a joint council, possibly, but not a single personality, like a president or a king.

Lord Halifax

Apparently it would closely resemble the original League of Nations, that failed to work before,
but might have done so in the opinion of a good many commentators, if we hadn't stayed out of it.

There are details that are decidedly puzzling, though.
As previously remarked, what about Russia?

Also what about the Germans,
the Italians and the Japs?
A world league, without them
included, would be a league AGAINST them, in effect—a league to prevent 'em from ever trying again what they're attempting now.

So far as the newspaper accounts are concerned, the term

"heart attack" is very vague anyway, and probably represents no
more than a guess and a convenient term for a newspaper reporter or a member of the family
to use to cover up ignorance.

Report on Patients
So it is heartening to find a report from Drs. E. F. Bland and Paul D. White of Boston, who have had a large number of cases of this kind and have observed them over several decades. They report on two hundred patients who undoubtedly had a real heart attack (angina pectoris or coronary thrombosis) between the years 1920 and 1930.

Thirty-one per cent of these patients are still living, the longest survival still alive being twenty-five years, and it may take another five years before it can be told exactly what the mortality in this group is.

Only nineteen per cent of the entire two hundred died within the first four years after the attack.
Sixty-nine per cent of the entire two hundred lived from one to ten years after the attack.

The conclusion is that a heart attack is by no means necessarily a prophecy of immediate doom.
With a very reasonable amount of care, the patient can be assured that he has at least a thirty per cent chance of living over ten years, and an eighty per cent chance of living from five to ten years.

Living Twenty Years After a "Heart Attack"

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE TERM "heart attack"
has been used and perhaps overused in the last ten years. I hardly ever see a morning newspaper
but that in the obituary column I see that some prominent person has died of a "heart attack," and in conversation with my friends it

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

is commonplace for someone to say, "So-and-so's husband died suddenly last week, I suppose of a "heart attack."

Naturally this creates an atmosphere of fear and a feeling that if a person has a heart attack, he is necessarily immediately doomed. When I hear the gloomy connotation that my friends put on "a heart attack," I think with pleasure of a number of patients who have survived a heart attack for a good many
years.

One is a retired United States Navy Captain who works in his garden, scrubs his front porch,
and often does a good day's cooking in spite of the fact that he was retired on account of a heart attack ten years ago.

I think of another friend who retired from the bond business and bade me a tearful farewell in 1930 and is still alive and kicking.
I can think of three or four others of the same kind.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
F. S. E.: Could a dropped stomach cause chronic indigestion?
Answer: Yes, it is one of the commonest conditions in which chronic indigestion occurs.

P. E. S.:—It is said that thirst is the great regulator of the need for water in the tissues, but I never seem to be thirsty. With coffee, tea, milk and some water at meals, I rarely ever want to drink water between meals. Should I force myself to drink water?

Answer: The principle still holds that thirst is the great regulator of the need for water in the body. If you are not thirsty, you are certainly getting enough water at meal time. Our food, in general, contains over 60% water, so with the foods you eat and the fluids
you list as being taken at meal
time, you are evidently getting plenty.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendenning has

CHAPTER FORTY-THREE

"LOOK, Mr. Whitworth, there's a car. It's pulling up to the gate,"
said one of the guards.

"Yeah! I see it." Suddenly Tay
gripped the guard's shoulder. "Ed, isn't that a woman getting into the car? It IS a woman. Let's go.
We're supposed to pick up Lundquist at the gate."

The car up ahead had pulled away. In a moment Tay and the three guards stopped at the gate.
But there was no Neil Lundquist.

"Something's gone wrong," one of the men in the rear seat said.
"Well, there's no time to look around," Tay said quickly. "Come on, follow them. We can't let 'em out of sight."

"We'd better turn out our lights, Ed," one of the men said. "Can't take a chance on their knowing they're being tailed—yet."

They switched off their lights and followed the car in front of them.
Not until they merged into slightly heavier traffic leading toward
New York did they turn them on.

Molla opened her eyes when the car stopped and the motor was turned off. Neil had recovered consciousness. He turned around weakly. "Easy does it, kid," he muttered.

Kurt, sitting behind the wheel,
merely looked back at her and said nothing. Otto got out and disappeared into a small apartment house.

Molla didn't recognize the apartment as one she had visited. Otto came out in a few minutes with a brief case and the car got under way again. A few minutes later they came to the George Washington bridge.

Otto pressed a gun into Nell's side as they approached the toll house. "Not a sound," he said. The same warning was transmitted to Molla in the back seat.

Kurt paid the toll and they crossed over to New Jersey at Fort Lee. Neil looked out and saw a sign pointing to New Jersey shore points.

For two long hours they hummed
over the broad shore highways.
Then they cut over some marshland and they smelled the sea air. Kurt drove off the road and up the driveway to a small house. A small stream ran almost through the back yard.

"And now my guests have arrived," he said mockingly. "Come."
Kurt dropped all ironical niceties when they were inside. "You will have that room there," he said to Molla, pointing. "It is as comfortable as possible under the circumstances."

He pointed to another room.
"You—in there," he said to Neil.
"In the morning we all shall have a chat—yes?"

Molla was too tired even to think. Still wearing Burton Whitworth's overcoat, she flopped down on the hard bed and covered herself with a blanket.

In the morning Kurt served them
coffee, bacon and eggs.
He watched them eat with great interest. "You have good appetites.
And a good appetite, well satisfied,
should put one in a pleasant mood."

Neil pushed his plate aside.
"Okay, snake eyes. What's the deal?"

Kurt's gaze was cold. "The deal,
as you put it, is quite simple—and as dealer I will call the game. My lovely one here refused to co-operate in the spirit I expected. Now it will be a little more difficult."

He dragged his chair up closer and straddled it from the rear,
leaning over the back. "No longer can I let sentiment interfere with my work. At this moment Mr. Burton Whitworth is in possession of our proposition for a trade—his concrete formula for Miss Glendon."

"I don't get it," Neil blurted.
"You are naïve. You force me to add . . . for Miss Glendon's life."

"You wouldn't dare," Neil said,
but even as he was saying it he read the look in Wilhelm's eyes and he knew he was wrong.

"No? We shall see. Whitworth has just 48 hours to deliver. But I shall give him every opportunity to see that we are not fooling. If there are no favorable results you shall precede her, my dear Mr.
Lundquist, as an indication of our mood."

"You are a fool, Kurt," Molla said. "Mr. Whitworth will never do it. Never. I will not let him."

Kurt smiled. "Yes, he will. You do not know the Americans. Their hearts bleed easily. Thus will Mr.
Whitworth's blood when he finds his precious Mr. Lundquist deposited on his step in a large sack, quite,
quite dead."

Molla shuddered as the picture flashed into her mind. There was no mistaking Kurt's cold, matter-of-fact manner of speech.

She looked over at Neil. His face was a mask, expressionless, unrevealing. She marveled at his composure. Surely, he must realize, too,
that Wilhelm was deadly in earnest,
that he would stop at nothing.

"Kurt," said Molla, "I believe I can give you the formula."
Neil's head jerked in surprise.

"Indeed," Kurt murmured.
"If there must be a traitor I would prefer it were me and not Burton Whitworth," Molla said.
"By mistake I made several carbon copies of the formula. I do not remember the equations, but I know the ingredients. That should suffice
the brilliant minds to whom you have sold your soul."

"Molla!" Neil shouted. "Shut up!
You don't know what you're saying."

Kurt walked over casually and slapped Neil across the face with his flat hand. For a split second Neil looked as though he would explode off his chair, but Otto stepped forward menacingly, his hand in his pocket.

"You are not a gentleman, else
you would not tell a lady to shut up," Kurt said mildly.

"And if she tells you what you want to know she isn't a lady," Neil grated.

Molla turned pleading eyes on him. "It is better this way," she said.

"Neil's lips drew to a thin,
straight line. 'Give me some paper
and a pencil,' she said to Kurt."

He produced the paper and she started writing. Kurt cursed savagely aloud and Neil smiled anusingly at him.

Molla finished writing and handed the paper to Kurt. He studied it for a moment, his hand caressing
his chin. "It isn't for me to say whether this may be correct, so,
even though I appreciate your gesture, we shall still await word from Whitworth."

Molla tried to catch Neil's eye,
but he looked away from her, starting out the window. Even from his profile she could notice the bitterness of his expression. She knew she would have little difficulty later on convincing him she hadn't given Kurt the right formula, but until then he would despise and hate her.

Suddenly one of Kurt's men burst into the house and tossed a torrent of German. Wilhelm cursed and sprang to his feet. Then he went to the window.

Molla's hopes leaped. She understood German. Someone had followed them. The house was being watched right then.

Kurt turned and faced them.
"So," he said. "Someone followed us here. It will do them no good."
Kurt drew his gun from his pocket
and held it in his hand loosely.
He opened a door which presumably led to a cellar.

"Down here," he ordered. "Sorry
we will not," here to entertain your stupid police."

MORALE
POSSIBLY too much is being said about "national morale." It makes people self-conscious and nervous. The more you discuss this sort of thing, the more our supposedly stout and patriotic nation tends to develop into an outfit of hypochondriacs, earnestly discussing their symptoms and getting nowhere.
What people need in such a situation is to forget about themselves, to get outside of themselves, to fix their attention on their country and its needs in this crisis, to keep so busy in useful work that they forget about their nerves and their souls.
This is not only the most useful way but the happiest way. Right now it may be a lot better, for most of us, than the vacations that Secretary Ickes has been recommending to boost morale. We have to harden and toughen our bodies and spirits, to go ahead and do the things that have to be done now. The sooner we get out of ourselves and onto the big job, the better.

FARMER FAR FROM TOWN
WITH the shortage of cars and tires, the isolated country-dweller is going to be in a fix. Apparently he is not considered for priority. Unlike the city resident he has no street car to fall back on. Yet he does have to go to his village, at least for the traditional Saturday night shopping. How is he to get there?
There may still be good old Dobbin. But does the farmer still have the old-fashioned carryall? We wonder if through all these years they are still in the barns. If not, farmers may be victims again of the isolation that was theirs before the building of modern roads.

FAVORITISM
NO FAVORITISM on top. That has been one reason for German success so far. We ourselves seem fairly free from it, but must be on guard.
In the last war Germany began with a mistake. The commander-in-chief, Helmut von Moltke, was chosen largely because he was the nephew of the great general Von Moltke, the victor of the Franco-Prussian war. Other and better men were available, but were passed over because they were distasteful to the Kaiser.
Whether Hitler has had military favorites, we do not know. The dismissal of the capable Von Brauchitsch, replaced by Hitler himself, was from the German standpoint an ominous sign. The allies, however, still hope to have Hitler show more and better favoritism.

WORLD AT A GLANCE ..... —By— Charles P. Stewart

WILL THE United Nations stay united after the war?
Lord Halifax, British ambassador in this country, expressed the hope recently that they may do so. Some sort of a permanent federation of all English speaking peoples has been suggested before, but the 26 United Nations of today include several that speak other languages. They all rate more or less as democracies, though. Some have kings and queens to be sure, and a few have presidents who classify pretty dictatorially. Nevertheless, that is, they have in the past and do yet. That they still do so when the war is over is a bit over-ly soon to say.
Indeed, there is considerable wondering whether or not we ourselves will, as a post-war proceeding, cancel the centralization of governmental authority that we've adopted for the pending emergency.
At World War No. 1's end we did just that pretty fast, but that was largely because Woodrow Wilson, in the White House at the time, having a genuine passion for democracy, with a small as well as a capital D, wished his emergency powers back into congress' hands as rapidly as he could. Some other president, whoever he may happen to be when the occasion arises, may not be so ready to surrender 'em. If he's balky it's liable to be difficult to get back to the old system.

Still, we'll consider ourselves a democracy, anyway, and the others will go on so considering themselves.

More to Come
In fact, if Lord Halifax gets his wish and the United Nations lasts on into the indefinite future, there are likely to be additions to the present 26—countries that haven't yet lined up, but surely will want to join if they see that the pact's due to be a permanency.
The U. S. A. and the Latin Americas would be a nucleus of 21. England and the various British sub-commonwealths would be in on it, of course. And the Chinese, the Scandinavians, the Low Countries and the rest of the collection that temporarily are under Axis domination. France will be free French by then, likewise; thus engine and presumably willing.

Russia'll be a problem.
The total will exceed 26 in any event—if the thing to continue as Lord Halifax hopes it will.
The idea seems rather more feasible than the suggested English-speaking federation. That kind of a federation appears to imply a supreme head of it, picked by the whole outfit collectively. Probably the British dominions would agree to the selection either of an Englishman or a Yankee, but it appears doubtful that the Limes or the Yanks, either of 'em, would consent to subordinating 'emselves to the others, either way.
A permanent United Nations combination, as Lord Halifax sketches out the scheme, evidently would be a looser organization, with nobody exactly at the top—a joint council, possibly, but not a single personality, like a king or a czar.

Apparently it would closely resemble the original League of Nations, that failed to work before, but might have done so, in the opinion of a good many commentators, if they hadn't stayed out of it.
There are details that are decidedly puzzling, though.
As previously remarked, what about Russia?
Also what about the Germans, the Italians and the Japs?
A world league, without them included, would be a league AGAINST them, in effect—a league to prevent 'em from ever trying again what they're attempting now.
Didn't Work Last Time
Well, that's just what failed to keep them suppressed before.
Seemingly it was a wrong prescription. Should the democracies insist on another dose of the same medicine?
And yet, how about taking 'em in?—such folk as they've proved themselves to be! The Italians, yes, perhaps after they've extinguished Duce Mussolini. And possibly the Germans, if they'll give evidence of reasonably good faith by terminating Fuhrer Hitler. But the Japs?—they're a near-impossibility.
Furthermore, even if invited, would they COME in?
Maybe so, nominally, if they previously have been licked so flat that they'll accept any terms at all, to escape being exterminated completely. Yeah, but that's exactly what happened at the end of World War No. 1. The Teutons took them, the best they could get, because they were all in and had to—and look at 'em now!

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round
BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN
GUAYULE RUBBER ACT
WASHINGTON — Agricultural advisers are urging the President to veto the Guayule rubber act just passed by Congress giving a lush rubber bonanza to the International Rubber company in Arizona and southern California.
By this act the government would lease lands, materials, and guayule seedlings from the International Rubber company for $2,000,000 and at the end of 10 years would turn them back to the private company with all the improvements; and since it takes several years for rubber plants to develop, the government presumably would turn the rubber plantations back to the private company just about the time they become a thriving and profitable business.
Even the contracts for synthetic rubber factories, being built through Jesse Jones' loans, contain safeguards for the government's future property interests.
Most interesting thing about this Guayule Act is that the bill as originally passed by the Senate went quite far in safeguarding the public's interests. It provided that the government might "purchase" the land from the International Rubber company and thus not be under obligation to return it after 10 years of improvement.
The Senate bill also provided that the government might acquire the property by condemnation instead of having a maximum figure of $2,000,000 fixed. The Senate bill also provided that lands might be acquired in any part of the Western Hemisphere, thus letting Mexico in on the deal under the Good Neighbor Policy—a country where guayule already grows. However, when certain Southwest Congressmen got through with the bill in the House, it was purged of all these protective provisions and confined the Secretary of Agriculture to leasing the land and relinquishing it after 10 years of improvement.
Note—During the final Senate debate, Senator Downey of California stated that the emasculated House bill had been okayed by Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long. Other State Department officials, it is known, did not agree with Long.

WHITE HOUSE BARRIERS
The street which separates the White House from the Treasury (East Executive avenue) is now blocked off on account of the war. Passing this barrier, a taxicab passenger remarked to the driver: "What's the matter? Don't they trust you cab drivers?"
"Oh yes, sir," replied the driver. "But they don't trust our passengers."
This particular passenger was William Vosmer, executive of Republic Steel corporation.

DIET AND HEALTH
Living Twenty Years After a "Heart Attack"
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE TERM "heart attack" has been used and perhaps over-used in the last ten years. I hardly ever see a morning newspaper but that in the obituary column I see that some prominent person has died of a "heart attack," and in conversation with my friends it is commonplace for someone to say, "So-and-so's husband died suddenly last week, I suppose of a 'heart attack.'"
Naturally this creates an atmosphere of fear and a feeling that if a person has a heart attack, he is necessarily immediately doomed. When I hear the gloomy connotation that my friends put on "a heart attack," I think with pleasure of a number of patients who have survived a heart attack for a good many years.
One is a retired United States Navy Captain who works in his garden, scrubs his front porch, and often does a good day's cooking in spite of the fact that he was retired on account of a heart attack ten years ago.
I think of another friend who retired from the bond business and bade me a tearful farewell in 1930 and is still alive and kicking. I can think of three or four others of the same kind.
Report on Patients
So it is heartening to find a report from Drs. E. F. Bland and Paul D. White of Boston, who have had a large number of cases of this kind and have observed them over several decades. They report on two hundred patients who undoubtedly had a real heart attack (angina pectoris or coronary thrombosis) between the years 1920 and 1930.
Thirty-one per cent of these patients are still living, the longest survival still alive being twenty-five years, and it may take another ten years before it can be told exactly what the mortality in this group is.
Only nineteen per cent of the entire two hundred died within the first four years after the attack. Sixty-nine per cent of the entire two hundred lived from one to ten years after the attack.
The conclusion is that a heart attack is by no means necessarily a prophecy of immediate doom. With a very reasonable amount of care, the patient can be assured that he has at least a thirty per cent chance of living over ten years, and an eighty per cent chance of living from five to ten years.
So far as the newspaper accounts are concerned, the term "heart attack" is very vague anyway, and probably represents no more than a guess and a convenient term for a newspaper reporter or a member of the family to use to cover up ignorance.

F. S. E.: Could a dropped stomach cause chronic indigestion?
Answer: Yes, it is one of the commonest conditions in which chronic indigestion occurs.
P. E. S.: It is said that thirst is the great regulator of the need for water in the tissues, but I never seem to be thirsty. With coffee, tea, milk and some water at meals, I rarely ever want to drink water between meals. Should I force myself to drink water?
Answer: The principle still holds that thirst is the great regulator of the need for water in the body. If you are not thirsty, you are certainly getting enough water at meal time. Our food, in general, contains over 60% water, so with the foods you eat and the fluids you list as being taken at meal time, you are evidently getting plenty.

THE HARDEN-STEVENSON CO.

"Indeed," Kurt murmured.
"If there must be a traitor I would prefer it were me and not Burton Whitworth," Molla said. "By mistake I made several carbon copies of the formula. I do not remember the equations, but I know the ingredients. That should suffice the brilliant minds to whom you have sold your soul."
"Molla!" Neil shouted. "Shut up! You don't know what you're saying."
Kurt walked over casually and slapped Neil across the face with his flat hand. For a split second Neil looked as though he would explode off his chair, but Otto stepped forward menacingly, his hand in his pocket.
"You are not a gentleman, else you would not tell a lady to shut up," Kurt said mildly.
"And if she tells you what you want to know she isn't a lady," Neil grated.
Molla turned pleading eyes on him. "It is better this way," she said.
"Neil's lips drew to a thin, straight line. 'Give me some paper and a pencil,' she said to Kurt."
He produced the paper and she started writing. Neil cursed savagely aloud and Kurt smiled amiably at him.
Molla finished writing and handed the paper to Kurt. He studied it for a moment, his hand caressing his chin. "It isn't for me to say whether this may be correct, so, even though I appreciate your gesture, we shall still await word from Whitworth."
Molla tried to catch Neil's eye, but he looked away from her, staring out the window. Even from his profile she could notice the bitterness of his expression. She knew she would have little difficulty later on convincing him she hadn't given Kurt the right formula, but until then he would despise and hate her.
Suddenly one of Kurt's men burst into the house and loosed a torrent of German. Wilhelm cursed and sprang to his feet. Then he went to the window.
Molla's hopes leaped. She understood German. Someone had followed them. The house was being watched right then.
Kurt turned and faced them. "So," he said. "Someone followed us here. It will do them no good." Kurt drew his gun from his pocket and held it in his hand loosely. He opened a door which presumably led to a cellar.
"Down here," he ordered. "Sorry we will not be here to entertain your stupid police."

Annual Guest Day Tea Of D. A. R. Huge Success

Educator's Talk, Music Enjoyed At Gathering

Using multitudinous sub-topics to drive home his main theme of "two sides to every story", Frank Fischer, superintendent of Circleville schools, delivered a forceful address Tuesday at the annual Guest Day tea of Pickaway Plains chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, in the social room of the First Presbyterian church.

In his talk, "East Side, West Side", Mr. Fischer literally tore the smug covering off many of the important issues of the day and forced an audience of more than 80 members and guests of the D. A. R. to face well-presented facts on the questions. With fine impartiality Mr. Fischer discussed the merits and flaws of many happenings of the last few years, especially in regard to government of our land and in the preparation for and conduct of the present war. He touched on our inherent right of "free speech", cautioning a temperate use during the emergency. He admitted our right to information concerning war preparations, supplies, the Pearl Harbor incident and many other questions of the day, but said the information should come later when there would be no question of benefit to our enemies.

Mr. Fischer alluded to us as a "temperamental people" in regard to our unceasing questioning of rights and acts of the rulers of our country, and said that eternally there was an obligation for us to look on all with unbiased eye.

His closing was an apt presentation of a poem from one of the old McGuffey readers, "Six Blind Men of Hindustan", in which each described his impression of an elephant after touching some part of its body. No other illustration of his unusually fine talk brought home so forcefully the futility of arriving at a conclusion without full information on a subject.

Mrs. James P. Moffitt, regent, and Mrs. Helen Black Anderson, chaplain, conducted the impressive ritualistic service at the opening of the meeting. Mrs. Fred Sexauer, regent, and several members of the Chillicothe chapter, D.A.R., were welcomed.

Mrs. G. P. Hunsicker, national defense chairman of the chapter, Mrs. Christliff Schwarz, Red Cross chairman, and Miss Marie L. Hamilton, chapter chairman for approved schools, spoke briefly in regard to their work.

Mrs. Hunsicker outlined a plan of service advanced by the national chapter and told that the week between Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays had been designated as National Defense week.

Mrs. Schwarz mentioned that the Circleville chapter had received credit for 1,000 hours of Red Cross work and told of the First Aid class which will begin February 23. There will be 20 lessons with Leo Curtis as instructor. Thirty-five women will be enrolled in the class which will meet Monday and Wednesday of each week at 7:30 p. m. She referred interested women to Miss Margaret Hunsicker for registration.

Miss Hamilton urged chapter members to keep in mind the pupils of the 14 approved schools when going through supplies during the coming spring. Miss Eleanor Snyder was heard in three lovely solos, "Musetta's Waltz" from La Boheme, "Through the Years", Vincent Youmans, and "Let My Song Fill Your Heart", Ernest Charles. Miss Abbe Mills Clarke played her piano accompaniments.

Mrs. Sexauer and Mrs. Moffitt presided at the silver coffee and tea services when tea was served from a table of attractive appointments.

Tall red, white and blue candles in double crystal holders guarded the centerpiece of small silk American flags.

Hostesses for the patriotic tea were Mrs. Orion King, Mrs. J. Beryl Stevenson, Mrs. C. D. Closson, Mrs. Helen E. Anderson, Mrs. Noah Spangler, Mrs. Ella Hornbeck, Miss Edith Haswell, Miss Emily D. Yates and Mrs. Charles H. May, in addition to the six new members of the chapter, Mrs. Eldred A. Cayce, Mrs. Schwarz, Mrs. Mary H. Spangler, Mrs. Doyle Haas and Miss Mary Spangler of

High score prizes were awarded at each table, lunch being served after the games.

The extra prizes were disposed of in a spirited auction conducted by Frank Lynch.

Child Conservation League

Mrs. Joe W. Adkins Jr., program chairman, presented Mrs. Walker who read a paper on "Domestic Help." She mentioned the scarcity of girls for housework helpers as due mainly to defense work, in which they find more personal freedom.

Mrs. Walker said that many who are available lack the necessary requirements for positions in homes, some being domineering, some too indifferent to children left in their care and most of them lacking real training in housework. She recommended part time services of skilled workers as the best way out of the problem. She urged consideration for domestic help for better response, mentioning that a little friendly criticism and a little praise, together with a little privacy, create the desired relationship between employer and maid.

Mrs. Reid read an article "Women and Inflation" in which economic stabilization was shown to be in women's hands. Her paper, "Some Hows on Housing", mentioned in opening that most of the comforts and some of the architectural beauty of the present American dwelling are due to modern invention and artistic conception. She stated that much of the beauty of design comes from the past, from the Cape Cod cottage, the plantation homes of Georgia, the Louisiana French type, Spanish missions, the Mexican style and the primitive adobe huts of the Indians.

Mrs. Reid presented a comprehensive discussion of various types of homes and traced the influence of their construction. She concluded with the thought, "Modern American homes are achievements to be proud of, the places where dreams and plans for a better world should be fostered."

The next meeting of the league will be at the home of Mrs. John Eselman, North Pickaway street.

Hewitt Harmount served as announcer for the various numbers which showed the result of excellent coaching. The first number was a dialogue, "Do You Want Me to Live With You," followed by a pantomime playlet, "A Modern Mother." "Yankee Doodle" was sung by a double quartet; play, "The Voice of the Flag"; concluding dialogue, "Some Modern George Washingtons."

On Guard—AGAINST FOOD WASTE

You know that many foods will spoil if not kept in a cool place. But do you know they not only dry up and wither, but many of their vitamins vanish into thin air? And that vitamins may be lost long before the food is "spoiled"? For example, lettuce may lose 40% of its vitamin C in one day standing at room temperature.

It's wasteful to lose healthful nutrition like that. And it isn't necessary. The modern Electric Refrigerator is scientifically designed to provide protection against such waste.

See the new General Electric Refrigerators today. Find out how they guard against the wasting of vitamins as well as against the better known food spoilage.

GIANTS SEEKING PAUL DERRINGER FROM RED TEAM

By Jack Mahon

NEW YORK, Feb. 19 — The team and its executives are roughly 1,500 miles away as we write this, but being in a positively bird-dog mood this afternoon, we molded around the baseball front and can state that if negotiations now underway are completed big Paul Derringer, burly right hander of the Cincinnati Reds, will become the property of the New York Giants in a deal that should be announced before the end of the month.

The Giants need another right handed pitcher and, as we get it, the deal, involving a straight cash settlement, has been virtually closed by President Horace Stoneham of the New Yorkers and Business Manager Warren Giles of the Reds.

The gentlemen conferred at the recent major league meetings and reached a tentative agreement. Though the Brooklyn Dodgers were also after Big Paul, the Reds would rather see the Giants get him than the National league champions, providing they can extract a similar amount of cashable cabbage for the transaction.

Our secret agent, one of the more reliable members of the famous "reliable source" family, says that somewhere in the neighborhood of $35,000 will be paid for "big Oom" if he is transferred to the banks of the Harlem river.

Red And Black Varsity Gets Started In Final Half To Whip Hilliards

Coeach Roy Black's in-and-out Circleville high Tigers were "in" Tuesday evening after a slow first half, and easily turned back Hilliards, Class A Franklin county quintet, by a 45-19 score at the C.A.C. The Tigers, held to a 14-10 score at halftime, stopped the invader scoreless in the third canto and ran up 31 points for themselves in the last two sessions.

The game was marked by a definite lack of personal fouls, with only two being called on the Tigers and three on the invaders. Not a foul was called until two and one-half minutes of the fourth quarter had passed.

Both teams were slow breaking into the scoring column, nearly four minutes of the first period being gone before the ice was broken. The Tigers grabbed a 6-2 lead at the quarter and retained the four point margin to be ahead 14-10 at the intermission. Ten more Tiger points were counted in the third quarter while Hilliards was held away from the net, and the locals ran up 21 counters in the last session against nine.

Hilliards made only two baskets all evening from under the net, the others coming from out on the floor. K. Walker proving adept at a set shot from beyond the free zone.

Don Valentine, after a slow start, paced the Tigers with seven buckets and a free toss. Jim Carr hit for nine and Jim Moorehead for 10. K. Walker was high for Hilliards with 10.

Circleville reserves ran up a 35-23 victory after trailing 21-22 as the last quarter started. Hilliards held a 16-13 lead at halftime.

Dud Smallwood hit the hoop for five buckets to pace the Tigers.

To Visit Greenfield

Circleville goes to Greenfield Friday night to meet Red Armstrong's fine McClain team. McClain won a 29-21 game here early in the season and the Tigers are hoping for revenge. Led by brilliant Don Grate, the Greenfield boys have not lost to an Ohio team during the regular playing season in the last two years.

State Auditor Joe T. Ferguson witnessed the game as a guest of O. P. Van Schoik, his chief assistant. Van Schoik's son plays center for Hilliards.

GIANTS SEEKING PAUL DERRINGER FROM RED TEAM

By Jack Mahon

NEW YORK, Feb. 19 — The team and its executives are roughly 1,500 miles away as we write this, but being in a positively bird-dog mood this afternoon, we molder around the baseball front and can state that if negotiations now underway are completed big Paul Derringer, burly right hander of the Cincinnati Reds, will become the property of the New York Giants in a deal that should be announced before the end of the month.

The Giants need another right handed pitcher and, as we get it, the deal, involving a straight cash settlement, has been virtually closed by President Horace Stoneham of the New Yorkers and Business Manager Warren Giles of the Reds.

The gentlemen conferred at the recent major league meetings and reached a tentative agreement. Though the Brooklyn Dodgers were also after Big Paul, the Reds would rather see the Giants get him than the National league champions, providing they can extract a similar amount of cashable cabbage for the transaction.

Our secret agent, one of the more reliable members of the famous "reliable source" family, says that somewhere in the neighborhood of $35,000 will be paid for "big Oom" if he is transferred to the banks of the Harlem river.

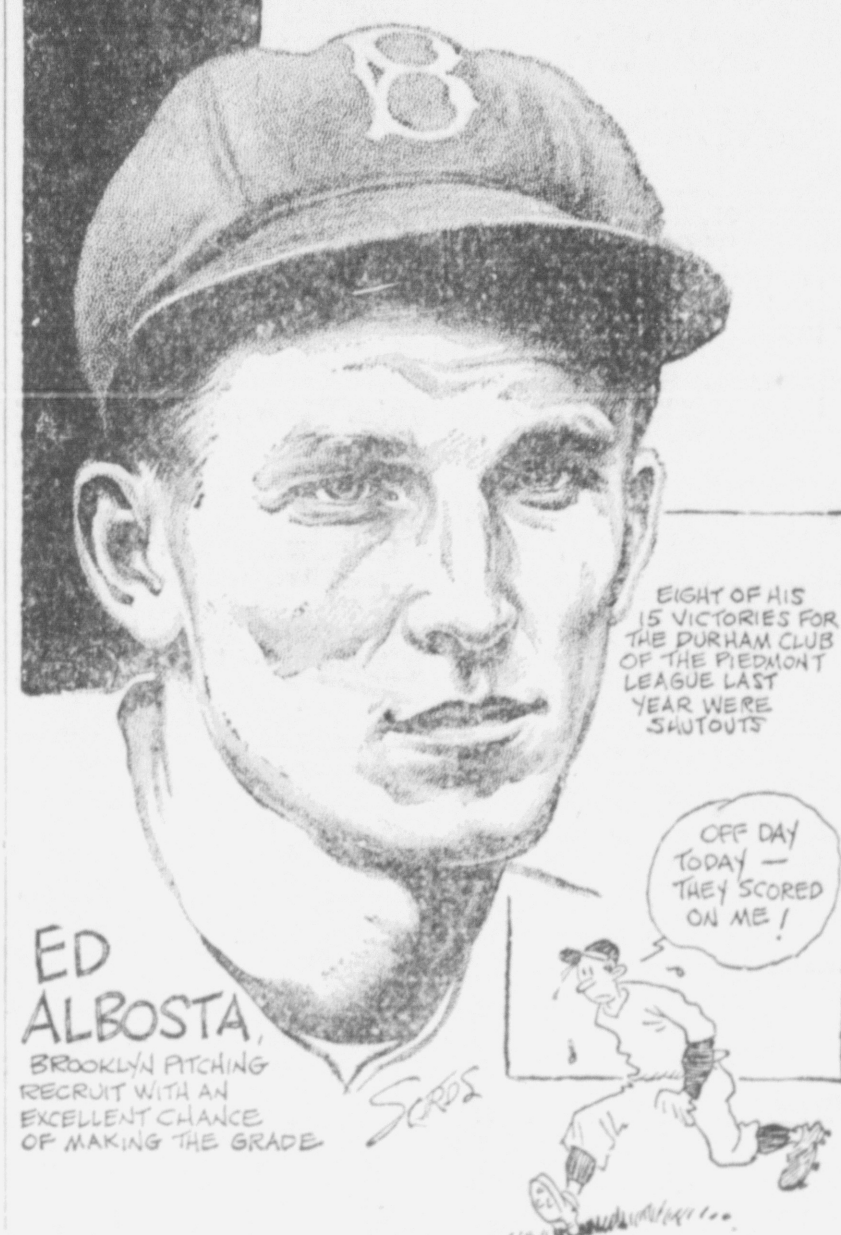

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 18 — Henry Frnka, football coach at the University of Tulsa, Okla., today was unofficially reported to be under serious consideration for the job of head football mentor at Yale university.

A Yale alumnus close to the school's advisory committee said Frnka will be sounded out within the next few days. Frnka went to the Oklahoma institution as head tutor last year after coaching the backs and ends at Temple university under Ray Morrison.

Also being scouted for the Yale post, the alumnus said, are Clipper Smith, Villanova, and Hook Mylin Lafayette. Previously Stanford Coach Clark Shaughnessy was said to be first in line for the position.

War has its compensations. Mother no longer tries to make the wafer of soap do till it's too thin to hold, and then stick it on the new cake with sad and slippery results. Now she thinks it's a virtue to throw the ends into a bowl to melt up for the washing machine.

Red And Black Varsity Gets Started In Final Half To Whip Hilliards

Coach Roy Black's in-and-out counted in the third quarter while Circleville high Tigers were 'in' Tuesday evening after a slow first half, and easily turned back Hilliards, Class A Franklin county quintet, by a 45-19 score at the C.A.C. The Tigers, held to a 14-10 score at halftime, stopped the invader scoreless in the third canto and ran up 31 points for themselves in the last two sessions.

The game was marked by a definite lack of personal fouls, only two being called on the Tigers and three on the invaders. Not a foul was called until two and one-half minutes of the fourth quarter had passed.

Both teams were slow breaking into the scoring column, nearly four minutes of the first period being gone before the ice was broken. The Tigers grabbed a 6-2 lead at the quarter and retained the four point margin to be ahead 14-10 at the intermission. Ten more Tiger points were counted in the third quarter while Hilliards was held away from the net, and the locals ran up 21 counters in the last session against nine.

Hilliards made only two baskets all evening from under the net, the others coming from out on the floor, K. Walker proving adept at a set shot from beyond the free zone.

Don Valentine, after a slow start, paced the Tigers with seven buckets and a free toss. Jim Carr hit for nine and Jim Moorehead for 10. K. Walker was high for Hilliards with 10.

Circleville reserves ran up a 35-23 victory after trailing 21-22 as the last quarter started. Hilliards held a 16-13 lead at halftime.

Dud Smallwood hit the hoop for five buckets to pace the Tigers.

To Visit Greenfield
Circleville goes to Greenfield Friday night to meet Red Armstrong's fine McClain team. McClain won a 29-21 game here early in the season and the Tigers are hoping for revenge. Led by brilliant Don Grate, the Greenfield boys have not lost to an Ohio team during the regular playing season in the last two years.

State Auditor Joe T. Ferguson witnessed the game as a guest of O. P. Van Schoik, his chief assistant. Van Schoik's son plays center for Hilliards.

Construction Work At Army Air Base May Be Under Way Soon

RAILROAD PUTS THREE MILES OF TRACK IN AREA

Laborers To Finish Tasks This Week; Many Farm Families Moving

ROADS BEING WIDENED

Engineer Awaits Orders To Go To Work On Highway North Of Ashville

Actual construction work on the Army air base north of Ashville is expected to start within a few days as farmers Wednesday were evacuating the 1,583 acre tract.

All farmers of the area must leave by Saturday, according to orders received from the war department, and reports from the neighborhood indicate that many of them already have gone.

Norfolk and Western railway workers still were at the site Wednesday, but work on the spur track from Lockbourne to the air base was nearing completion and the 150 railroad men working on the project probably will leave within the next few days.

A. V. Osborn, N. and W. agent, said Wednesday that all tracks to the air base had been laid and leveling and cleaning up work was all that remained to be done so far as the railroad is concerned. The workers probably will be gone by the end of the week, he said. Approximately three miles of track have been laid in the vicinity of the project. It includes a 1½ mile spur from the railway company's main line at Lockbourne to the air base and several short branches to the spur.

No official announcement that contracts for the project have been let has been made by the War department, although persons connected closely with the project report that contractors are expected to arrive yet this week.

The base will be located in Madison township, Franklin county, all being south of Route 665 and west of Shook road. The southern-most limit of the base will border on the northern extremity of Madison township, Pickaway county.

It is estimated that the project will cost between $8,000,000 and $12,000,000.

Franklin county engineers are busy widening Shook road to the air base and some believe that the portion of the road which lies in Pickaway county between the project and Ashville also will be widened. County Engineer Henry McCrady reports, however, that he has received no information from the government on such a proposal.

GUY EARL GRAY OF LOCKBOURNE IS DEAD AT 62

Guy Earl Gray, 62, postmaster at Lockbourne for 30 years and widely known in the Ashville community, died at his home Tuesday following an illness of several weeks.

Mr. Gray, who also operated a hardware store in Lockbourne, resigned the postmastership in October because of ill health. He was a Mason and a member of the Lockbourne Methodist church.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Bertha Pontius Gray, and a daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Sawyer, Lockbourne.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. in the Lockbourne Methodist church with burial in Fernwood cemetery.

ASHVILLE MAN SUFFERS HEART ATTACK IN CAR

Walter W. VanGundy, 37, of Ashville, suffered a heart attack Tuesday night when he was driving his car in Columbus.

An emergency squad was called and Mr. VanGundy was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital. Firemen said he stopped his car when he felt faint. His condition Wednesday was reported to be fairly good.

SCIOTO WATERS RISING; BOTTOM LAND IN DANGER

Waters of the Scioto river were rising rapidly Wednesday and in the very low places were pushing into the bottom lands.

Measurement Wednesday morning indicated that the water had risen 5.05 feet in 24 hours, the reading being 11.82. The stage is slightly under that of February 8 when the water reached 11.82 feet, 1.19 feet below flood stage.

The water still was rising, Irvin Leist, local weather observer said, although the expected cold wave may check it before it reaches flood stage. Recent rains in the local community and melted snows to the north account for the rapid rise, Mr. Leist said.

Temperatures Tuesday rose to 51 degrees and Wednesday morning the mercury stood at 27. A year ago Wednesday the official low temperature was 10 degrees. A cold wave with temperatures dropping to 10 above zero was predicted by the weatherman for Wednesday night.

WEATHER FAILS TO CHANGE AID BILL IN COUNTY

Sub-zero weather early in January and any dislocations in employment due to the conversion of industry to wartime production failed to alter materially the relief picture in Pickaway county last month.

Relief Director Delos Marcy reported Wednesday that the total relief bill for the county last month was $4,593.45. State relief bill allocation for January for Pickaway county was $3,033.

In Ohio, State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood reported that although the case load increased 3,120 cases over December, costs were $1,308,318, or $9,600 less than the $1,317,918 expended the last month of 1941. Sherwood explained the apparent paradox by pointing out that many cases received only partial relief, such as coal supplies for the period of extreme cold.

Compared with a year ago, the January bill nearly $600,000 less than spent in January, 1941, while the 46,471 cases aided last month represented a drop of more than 30,000.

PLAN TO REFUND BONDS WILL BE VIEWED TONIGHT

City Council's regular meeting Wednesday night may see councilmen taking action either to adopt or to discard a bond refunding program which would provide money for the city's general fund.

Council met as a committee of the whole last Wednesday night in an effort to determine what action it would take on the plan but no agreement was reached and the measure still rests with the finance committee under the direction of Frank A. Lynch.

Some of the councilmen feel that the money is badly needed for current expenses, including street lights and additional police protection, while others have expressed belief that refunding the bonds

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, draft director, today left with Congress the announcement that some 1,000,000 men now deferred because of dependents, will be re-classified and inducted into active service. The announcement stirred immediate repercussions, with Rep. Edmonston (D) W. Va., declaring that he will seek speedy consideration of his bill to have men in service with dependents to allot $15 a month of their pay to help support those left behind.

Hershey's statement was made at a secret meeting of the House military affairs committee. He told members that, in the main, the Army was permitting more deferments for essential occupations in order to insure continued production, but that it was drastically tightening other regulations.

"And he said they were going to get tougher and tougher as time goes on," one member declared. "They've got to do it to raise the kind of an Army they want."

Besides the 1,000,000 additional the Army will pick up by reclassifying married men with working wives and other such "borderline" cases, Hershey told the committee that many others will be obtained by slight relaxation of physical requirements.

The general previously had endorsed the compulsory allotment idea, on the grounds that with such a provision the borderline dependency cases could be brought into active duty.

Similar To Last War Edmonston's bill is modeled after a similar system used in the World War, and here is the way it would work.

The administrator of veterans' affairs would be empowered to determine whether or not a man called into service, or who volunteered for service, had any dependents.

If so, $15 would be deducted from the soldier's pay and given each month to the dependent.

If there were only one dependent—a wife and no child, or a child and no wife—the government would match the deduction and the dependent would receive a total of $30 a month.

If there were two dependents, for example a wife and child, the government would put up $30, to make a total of $45.

If three dependents, the government would pay $40 and for each additional dependent, $5 more up to a total of $50.

"This is the only fair thing to do," Edmonston declared. "We have got somehow to provide for those left behind, and the government shouldn't undertake to do it all. I think the way it will work, no man will be called on to make the compulsory allotments until he has been in service for at least four months, and by that time he will be getting at least $30 a month."

would only make it more difficult for the city to pay them back in the future.

BRICKER NAMES 28 TO DIRECT SALVAGE TASKS

COLUMBUS, Feb. 18—Launching the "Salvage for Victory" program in Ohio, Governor Bricker today appointed 28 representatives of business, industry, agriculture and the Army to a state salvage committee and called a meeting of the group for Thursday.

Under the direction of the Ohio State Council of Defense, the committee will cooperate with the federal Bureau of Industrial Conservation to carry the "Salvage for Victory" program to every city, town and village in the state.

Governor Bricker recently named Lee E. Pierson, of Stow, state superintendent of purchase and printing, as chairman of the committee, while his nomination of Robert O. Weible, Dover, as secretary was approved by the War Production Board's bureau of industrial conservation.

When the committee meets Thursday at the state office building here, plans will be discussed for an all-out collection of scrap metal, rags, rubber and waste paper.

"There is no longer such a thing as junk," the governor declared. "A pile of so-called junk when transformed becomes tanks, bombers and bullets. A pile of old newspapers is a potential cardboard carton needed to carry weapons, ammunition and medical supplies to the battle lines."

Governor Bricker said that America's military forces were turning their attention to the home, the farm, the attic and the backyard for the thousands of tons of scrap metal, waste paper, old rags and old rubber that may be converted into vitally needed war materials.

The Ohio State Council of Defense some time ago instructed local defense councils to assist in the scrap collection program destined to continue for the duration of the war.

Governor Bricker said that in contacting local authorities he would urge the employment of the existing waste materials trade in sorting, grading, preparing and shipping of all waste materials.

"In addition, all local committees should cooperate with local charities which have been collecting scrap and waste materials, or with any school or other organizations that are now engaged in salvage work," he added.

LETTERS REMOVED FROM CLIPPER USED IN TRIAL

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—Suspicious letters culled from clipper mail by Bermuda censors were added today to the mounting evidence against six defendants accused of being Nazi spies.

The mechanics of censorship on the British island were described in detail in federal court yesterday by Charles Robert Watkins-Mence, controller of imperial censorship at Bermuda, and a group of his subordinates.

Watkins-Mence said he had turned over "some hundreds" of suspicious letters each day to American authorities for investigation.

Deputy Sheriff Ray Killian of Spokane, Wash., testified that Kurt Frederick Ludwig, one of the defendants, had offered him $50,000 to get him out of jail last August.

TOM DEWEY AND USO

Main reason for the resignation of Tom Dewey as national chairman of the United Service Organization was that he wanted to throw his full energies into campaigning for the New York governorship. However, this isn't the whole story.

Inside fact is that Dewey has been fed up with the USO job for some time, tells friends that it might prove more a liability than a help in the gubernatorial campaign.

The New York racket-buster plans to make the governorship (if he wins) a springboard to the GOP presidential nomination in 1944, and the USO chairmanship seemed like an excellent publicity sideline when he first took over. However, it hasn't worked out that way.

The USO has failed somehow to catch the public fancy, though Dewey himself has done a remarkable job raising funds. To friends, Dewey has made no secret of his dissatisfaction.

Last fall Dewey furiously served notice on the Federal Works Administration that he would demand an investigation if the FWA didn't expedite the building of recreational centers for service men. These centers are operated with USO funds and personnel.

Later the War Department took charge of construction, and things began to move—but still not fast enough for Dewey. Recently he complained to intimates:

Construction Work At Army Air Base May Be Under Way Soon

RAILROAD PUTS THREE MILES OF TRACK IN AREA

ROADS BEING WIDENED

Engineer Awaits Orders To Go To Work On Highway North Of Ashville

Actual construction work on the Army air base north of Ashville is expected to start within a few days as farmers Wednesday were evacuating the 1,583 acre tract.

All farmers of the area must leave by Saturday, according to orders received from the war department, and reports from the neighborhood indicate that many of them already have gone.

Norfolk and Western railway workers still were at the site Wednesday, but work on the spur track from Lockbourne to the air base was nearing completion and the 150 railroad men working on the project probably will leave within the next few days.

A. V. Osborn, N. and W. agent, said Wednesday that all tracks to the air base had been laid and leveling and cleaning up work was all that remained to be done so far as the railroad is concerned. The workers probably will be gone by the end of the week, he said. Approximately three miles of track have been laid in the vicinity of the project. It includes at 1½ mile spur from the railway company's main line at Lockbourne to the air base and several short branches to the spur.

No official announcement that contracts for the project have been let has been made by the War department, although persons connected closely with the project report that contractors are expected to arrive by this week.

The base will be located in Madison township, Franklin county, all being south of Route 665 and west of Shook road. The southern-most limit of the base will border on the northern extremity of Madison township, Pickaway county.

It is estimated that the project will cost between $8,000,000 and $12,000,000.

Franklin county engineers are busy widening Shook road to the air base and some believe that the portion of the road which lies in Pickaway county between the project and Ashville also will be widened. County Engineer Henry McCrady reports, however, that he has received no information from the government on such a proposal.

GUY EARL GRAY OF LOCKBOURNE IS DEAD AT 62

Guy Earl Gray, 62, postmaster at Lockbourne for 30 years and widely known in the Ashville community, died at his home Tuesday following an illness of several weeks.

Mr. Gray, who also operated a hardware store in Lockbourne, resigned the postmastership in October because of ill health. He was a Mason and a member of the Lockbourne Methodist church.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Bertha Pontius Gray, and a daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Sawyer, Lockbourne.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. in the Lockbourne Methodist church with burial in Fernwood cemetery.

SCIOTO WATERS RISING; BOTTOM LAND IN DANGER

Waters of the Scioto river were rising rapidly Wednesday and in the very low places were pushing into the bottom lands.

Measurement Wednesday morning indicated that the water had risen 5.05 feet in 24 hours, the reading being 11.82. The stage is slightly under that of February 8 when the water reached 11.82 feet, 1.19 feet below flood stage.

The water still was rising, Irvin Leist, local weather observer said, although the expected cold wave may check it before it reaches flood stage. Recent rains in the local community and melted snows to the north account for the rapid rise, Mr. Leist said.

Temperatures Tuesday rose to 51 degrees and Wednesday morning the mercury stood at 27. A year ago Wednesday the official low temperature was 10 degrees. A cold wave with temperatures dropping to 10 above zero was predicted by the weatherman for Wednesday night.

WEATHER FAILS TO CHANGE AID BILL IN COUNTY

Sub-zero weather early in January and any dislocations in employment due to the conversion of industry to wartime production failed to alter materially the relief picture in Pickaway county last month.

Relief Director Delos Marcy reported Wednesday that the total relief bill for the county last month was $1,593.45. State relief bill allocation for January for Pickaway county was $3,038.

In Ohio, State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood reported that although the case load increased 2,129 cases over December, costs were $1,308.218, or $9,600 less than the $1,317,918 expended the last month of 1941. Sherwood explained the apparent paradox by pointing out that many cases received only partial relief, such as coal supplies for the period of extreme cold.

Compared with a year ago, the January bill nearly $600,000 less than spent in January, 1941, while the 46,471 cases aided last month represented a drop of more than 30,000.

PLAN TO REFUND BONDS WILL BE VIEWED TONIGHT

City Council's regular meeting Wednesday night may see councilmen taking action either to adopt or to discard a bond refunding program which would provide money for the city's general fund.

Council met as a committee of the whole last Wednesday night in an effort to determine what action it would take on the plan but no agreement was reached and the measure still rests with the finance committee under the direction of Frank A. Lynch.

Some of the councilmen feel that the money is badly needed for current expenses, including street lights and additional police protection, while others have expressed belief that refunding the bonds
